

Lord of love

we pray for this couple

be with them in all their preparations and

on their wedding day

give them your love in their hearts

throughout their

married life together

through Jesus Christ our Lord

Amen

Congratulations on your forthcoming wedding!

A Church of England wedding offers you the support of your local church and the church where you are going to be married, if that is in a different place.

This includes the reading of your wedding banns when your names are read in church according to a legal custom, and everyone in those churches will be praying for you.

These occasions can be very special and moving.

If you'd like to join us for the reading of your banns, we'd love to see you.

Your wedding banns will be read at the following services:

The words overleaf are an example of a prayer that may be used when your banns are called. For more information about banns and why they are read in church before your wedding, visit www.yourchurchwedding.org Featured extract from Common Worship © The Archbishops' Council.
